

December 14, 2015

Beadle County Commission
450 3rd St SW Suite 201
Huron, SD 57350

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kent Vlieger, DC, NRCS, Huron FO

December 14, 2015

Brookings County Commission
520 3rd St Suite 210
Brookings, SD 57006

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Lynsee Planting, Acting, DC, NRCS, Madison FO

December 14, 2015

Brule County Commission
300 S Courtland St Suite 103
Chamberlain, SD 57325

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Stacy Turgeon, DC, NRCS, Chamberlain FO

December 14, 2015

Butte County Commission
839 5th Ave
Belle Fourche, SD 57717

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Justin Boerboom, Acting, DC, NRCS, Belle Fourche FO

December 14, 2015

Bennett County Commission
P.O. Box 460
Martin, SD 57551

Dear Director:

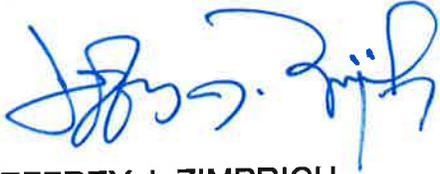

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Sandra Huber, DC, NRCS, Martin FO

December 14, 2015

Brown County Commission
25 Market St Suite 1
Aberdeen, SD 57401

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Jaime Rindels, DC, NRCS, Aberdeen FO

December 14, 2015

Buffalo County Commission
P.O. Box 146
Gann Valley, SD 57341

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Jaime Fuhrman, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Clark County Commission
P.O. Box 294
Clark, SD 57225

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Shane Jordan, DC, NRCS, Clark FO

December 14, 2015

Aurora County Commission
P.O. Box 397
Plankinton, SD 57368

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Heidi Rients, Acting, DC, NRCS, Mitchell FO

December 14, 2015

Campbell County Commission
P.O. Box 37
Mound City, SD 57646

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Christine Lousias, DC, NRCS, Mound City FO

December 14, 2015

Charles Mix County Commission
P.O. Box 490
Lake Andes, SD 57356

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kelly Tschumper, DC, NRCS, Lake Andes FO

December 14, 2015

Clay County Commission
211 W Main St Suite 200
Vermillion, SD 57069

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Jeff Loof, DC, NRCS, Elk Point FO

December 14, 2015

Codington County Commission
14 1st Ave SE
Watertown, SD 57201

Dear Director:

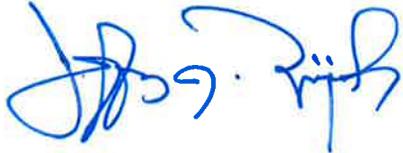

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
James Dylla, DC, NRCS, Watertown FO

December 14, 2015

Corson County Commission
P.O. Box 255
McIntosh, SD 57641

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Edward Bahm, DC, NRCS, McIntosh

December 14, 2015

Custer County Commission
420 Mt Rushmore Rd
Custer, SD 57730

Dear Director:

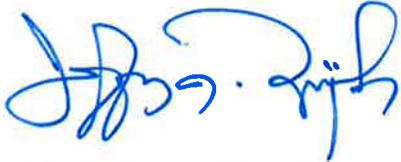

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Brad Humbracht, DC, NRCS, Hot Springs FO

December 14, 2015

Davison County Commission
200 E 4th Ave
Mitchell, SD 57301

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Heidi Rients, Acting, DC, NRCS, Mitchell FO

December 14, 2015

Day County Commission
711 W 1st St, Ste 204
Webster, SD 57274

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:
Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Matt Hubers, Acting, DC, NRCS, Webster FO

December 14, 2015

Deuel County Commission
P.O. Box 616
Clear Lake, SD 57226

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Amy Engels, DC, NRCS, Clear Lake FO

December 14, 2015

Dewey County Commission
P.O. Box 277
Timber Lake, SD 57656

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kari Jo Lawrence, DC, NRCS, Timber Lake FO

December 14, 2015

Douglas County Commission
P.O. Box 159
Armour, SD 57313

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kelly Tschumper, DC, NRCS, Lake Andes FO

December 14, 2015

Edmunds County Commission
P.O. Box 97
Ipswich, SD 57451

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name being the most prominent.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Valeree DeVine, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Fall River County Commission
906 N River St
Hot Springs, SD 57747

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Brad Humbracht, DC, NRCS, Hot Springs FO

December 14, 2015

Faulk County Commission
P.O. Box 309
Faulkton, SD 57438

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Grady Heitman, DC, NRCS, Faulkton FO

December 14, 2015

Grant County Commission
210 E 5th Ave
Milbank, SD 57252

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Matt Hubers, Acting, DC, NRCS, Webster FO

December 14, 2015

Gregory County Commission
P.O. Box 437
Burke, SD 57523

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Brandon Walter, DC, NRCS, Burke FO

December 14, 2015

Haakon County Commission
P.O. Box 698
Philip, SD 57567

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Nina Pekron, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Hamlin County Commission
P.O. Box 237
Hayti, SD 57241

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
James Dylla, DC, NRCS, Watertown FO

December 14, 2015

Hand County Commission
415 W 1st Ave
Miller, SD 57362

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and a prominent "Z".

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kent Baumberger, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Harding County Commission
P.O. Box 26
Buffalo, SD 57720

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Jaime Fuhrman, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Hughes County Commission
104 E Capitol Ave
Pierre, SD 57501

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Dillon Blaha, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Hutchinson County Commission
140 Euclid St Rm 128
Olivet, SD 57052

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Brent Woods, DC, NRCS, Parkston FO

December 14, 2015

Hyde County Commission
P.O. Box 379
Highmore, SD 57345

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Mike Larson, DC, NRCS, Highmore FO

December 14, 2015

Jackson County Commission
P.O. Box 280
Kadoka, SD 57543

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kelly O'Connell, DC, NRCS, Kadoka FO

December 14, 2015

Jerauld County Commission
P.O. Box 422
Wess. Sprgs., SD 57382

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and a distinct "Z" at the end.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Donna Tiede, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Jones County Commission
P.O. Box 307
Murdo, SD 57559

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and a prominent flourish at the end.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Ryan Willert, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Kingsbury County Commission
P.O. Box 196
De Smet, SD 57231

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Jim Finnegan, DC, NRCS, DeSmet FO

December 14, 2015

Lake County Commission
200 E Center St
Madison, SD 57042

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and a prominent flourish at the end.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:
Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Lynsee Planting, Acting, DC, NRCS, Madison FO

December 14, 2015

Lawrence County Commission
P.O. Box F
Deadwood, SD 57732

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Justin Boerboom, Acting, DC, NRCS, Belle Fourche FO

December 14, 2015

Lincoln County Commission
104 N Main, Ste 110
Canton, SD 57013

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Deron Ruesch, DC, NRCS, Sioux Falls FO

December 14, 2015

Lyman County Commission
P.O. Box 38
Kennebec, SD 57544

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and a prominent "Z".

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Shane Reis, DC, NRCS, Kennebec FO

December 14, 2015

Marshall County Commission
P.O. Box 130
Britton, SD 57430

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized with loops and a prominent initial "J".

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Judith Schultz, DC, NRCS, Brookings FO

December 14, 2015

McCook County Commission
P.O. Box 190
Salem, SD 57058

Dear Director:

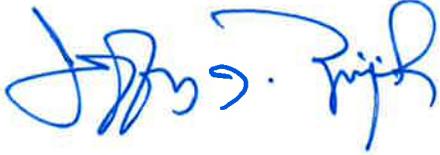

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and a long, sweeping underline.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Dan Mehlhaf, DC, NRCS, Brookings FO

December 14, 2015

McPherson County Commission
P.O. Box 390
Leola, SD 57456

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
John Bender, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Meade County Commission
1300 Sherman St STE 126
Sturgis, SD 57785

Dear Director:

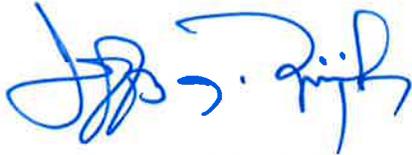

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Tanse Herrmann, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Mellette County Commission
P.O. Box C
White River, SD 57579

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
James Dylla, DC, NRCS, Hayti FO

December 14, 2015

Miner County Commission
P.O. Box 86
Howard, SD 57349

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kirk Lindgren, DC, NRCS, Howard FO

December 14, 2015

Minnehaha County Commission
415 N Dakota Ave
Sioux Falls, SD 57104

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:
Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Deron Ruesch, DC, NRCS, Sioux Falls FO

December 14, 2015

Moody County Commission
101 E Pipestone Ave Suite D
Flandreau, SD 57028

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Rhonda Nelson, DC, NRCS, Flandreau FO

December 14, 2015

Ogala Lakota County Commission
906 N River St
Hot Springs, SD 57747

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" being more prominent and the last name "Zimprich" following in a similar style.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Brad Humbracht, DC, NRCS, Hot Springs FO

December 14, 2015

Pennington County Commission
130 Kansas City Street Suite 230
Rapid City, SD 57701

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Matthew Odden, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Perkins County Commission
P.O. Box 126
Bison, SD 57620

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:
Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Sarah Eggebo, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Potter County Commission
201 S Exene St
Gettysburg, SD 57442

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kory Kezar, DC, NRCS, Gettysburg FO

December 14, 2015

Roberts County Commission
411 2nd Ave E, Ste 1B
Sisseton, SD 57262

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs:

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" being more prominent than the last name "Zimprich".

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kent Duerre, DC, NRCS, Brookings FO

December 14, 2015

Sanborn County Commission
P.O. Box 7
Woonsocket, SD 57385

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large initial "J" and "Z".

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Kent Vlieger, DC, NRCS, Huron FO

December 14, 2015

Spink County Commission
210 E 7th Ave
Redfield, SD 57469

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" being the most prominent part.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Shane Jordan, DC, NRCS, Brookings FO

December 14, 2015

Stanley County Commission
P.O. Box 595
Fort Pierre, SD 57532

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" being more prominent and larger than the last name "Zimprich".

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Dillan Blaha, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Sully County Commission
P.O. Box 265
Onida, SD 57564

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Trevis Olson, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Todd County Commission
200 E 3rd St
Winner, SD 57580

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" and last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Leland Schoon, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Tripp County Commission
200 E 3rd St
Winner, SD 57580

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:
Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Steven Higgins, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO

December 14, 2015

Turner County Commission
P.O. Box 370
Parker, SD 57053

Dear Director:

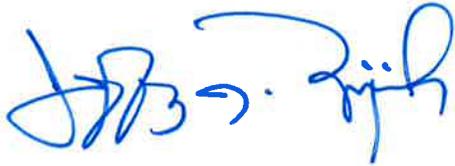

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "J.J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "J.J." and the last name "Zimprich" clearly distinguishable.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Merris Miller, DC, NRCS, Brookings FO

December 14, 2015

Union County Commission
209 E Main St Suite 200
Elk Point, SD 57025

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Jeff Loof, DC, NRCS, Elk Point FO

December 14, 2015

Walworth County Commission
P.O. Box 199
Selby, SD 57472

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is fluid and cursive, with the first name "Jeffrey" being more prominent and the last name "Zimprich" following in a similar style.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Denis Bachman, DC, NRCS, Pierre FO

December 14, 2015

Yankton County Commission
321 W 3rd, Suite 100
Yankton, SD 57078

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:
Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Mark Brannen, DC, NRCS, Yankton FO

December 14, 2015

Ziebach County Commission
P.O. Box 68
Dupree, SD 57623

Dear Director:

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is a federal agency that works with private landowners to help them conserve, maintain, and improve their natural resources. The NRCS emphasizes voluntary, science-based conservation; technical assistance; partnerships; incentive-based programs; and cooperative problem solving at the community level. Over the next several years, the NRCS will continue to assist landowners, in South Dakota (SD), with conservation activities as part of its Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP) and other programs throughout SD. Project activities may include such things as pipelines and watering tanks for livestock, animal waste storage facilities, planning shelterbelts or riparian buffers, grassed waterways, terraces, and other conservation practices.

As a federal agency, the NRCS complies with the National Historic Preservation Act (NHPA) of 1966 and takes historic properties (i.e., buildings, structures, archeological sites, objects, and districts eligible or listed in the National Register of Historic Places) into account for all undertakings that have the potential to affect such properties. To assist the NRCS in identifying historic properties (also called cultural resources) that may be important to different communities or groups, we are soliciting public involvement and consultation on our activities, and are asking you to please respond to this letter if your organization has specific locations of concern regarding historic properties. While the SD NRCS has professional cultural resource specialists on staff and each project with the potential to affect historic properties is checked for known archeological sites or national or state register listed properties, local communities are often aware of other resources in their rural areas that have not been previously identified on state or national lists. If your organization does have locations of cultural resource concerns, please identify these general areas on a town or county map and return the map to our office within 45 days of receipt of this letter. As our office reviews future EQIP or other program applications, the NRCS will identify those program activities which have the potential to affect historic properties/cultural resources and consult with any identified interested public official on a project-by-project basis. If you have no specific concerns, you may either notify our office of such in writing or simply not respond to this letter. Also, please let the NRCS know if you are aware of any other interested individuals or groups. For your information, similar letters have also been sent to local and county historical societies.

Please visit our Web site at <http://www.sd.nrcs.usda.gov/> to find out more about our agency and programs.

Please contact Dana R. Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, at (605) 352-1217 if you have any further questions or concerns. Thank you for your cooperation in protecting our important resources.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, appearing to read "Jeffrey J. Zimprich". The signature is stylized and cursive.

JEFFREY J. ZIMPRICH
State Conservationist

cc:

Dana Vaillancourt, State Cultural Resource Specialist, NRCS, Huron SO
Nathan Grueb, DC, NRCS, Rapid City FO